ORGANIZED BERRY GROWERS SATURDAY

Good Representative Crowd of Farmers Present at Meeting.

The farmers chiefly in the section between the Troy and Dyersburg roads met Saturday in the Farm Bureau office in response to a call to organize a strawberry growers' association.

A good representative crowd of interested farmers were present, and after a thorough discussion of the possibilities of the merits of the strawberry crop, an organization was perfected.

The following officers and directors were elected: President, Hugh French; vice president, S. A. Wilson; secretary, treasurer, Dr. C. W. Curlin; directors, Charles Isbell, Virgil Hodge, Charles Wilson and John Barnett. The following committee was appointed to draft a constitution and by laws: Dr. Curlin, Henry Pollock and O. L. Cunningham.

Over sixty acres are pledged for strawberries. This is sufficient to ship a car per day. The strawberry slips will be ordered the latter part of the week, so as to be ready for planting the first of next week. Any one who has not pledged himself to grow berries and desires to do so should see Dr. Curlin, W. A. Johnson or the County Agent. It was ascertained that the transportation would cost no more for Hickman than it costs the people of Humboldt, Tenn., section, and they have found strawberries immensely profitable for the past fifteen years. It was decided that all new acreage put out would be of the Aroma variety. It is the best shipper we have, one of the largest berries, a big producer and a good seller.

This is a splendid move for these farmers. The bluff section south of Hickman is especially adapted to fruit, berries, sweet potatoes and chickens, and if the farmers of that section would adopt that combination of crops it can be made one of the best sections of Fulton county.

Now, Mr. Business Man of Hickman, if you have an eye for business—if you belong to that bunch they call progressives—if you associate yourselves with those they call public spirited and interested in the development of their community—you will realize that the success or failure of this organization will have a direct relation to your purse. It is not only true in case of the strawberry association or a potato growers' association, but of any other improvement in the methods of farming or otherwise. The farmer is your customer, and if you would have him trade with you or pay the bill he already owes, then help him to make something to buy or pay with. Just remember that we all prosper or fail together—that prosperous farmers make a prosperous town. Of course, you will get some business if you just stand and wait for it to float up to you, but you will get a lot more if you go after it.

ARRESTED FOR ROBBING WALKER HOME

On proof given by his mother in law, Mrs. Walters, Dee Hutchcraft was arrested last Sunday morning on a warrant sworn out by Colonel C. L. Walker charging him with robbing his house on the night of March 4. Hutchcraft has been separated from his wife for some time, but has been trying to effect a reconciliation, and one week after Colonel Walker's house was robbed, so we are told, sent his wife a pair of oxfords. Some time later Mrs. Hutchcraft's father, Mr. Walters, was in Pearson's shoe shop, in West Hickman, when Col. Walker left a pair of Mrs. Walker's oxfords there for repair, and he discovered they were the same size as the pair sent his daughter by her husband. Last Sunday morning, after Hutchcraft had a stormy interview with his wife on Saturday, his mother in law, Mrs. Walters, brought the oxfords to Mrs. Walker and asked if they were hers. They were, and had been in the chiffoniere on the night of the robbery, the same place that Mr. Walker's clothing was taken from. Hutchcraft was arrested immediately and placed in jail, but he denied all knowledge of the robbery. Dock Wallace, who was with him that night, was also arrested, but the latter was released later.

Hutchcraft has served one term in the penitentiary for housebreaking and was let out on parole about five or six years ago, Mr. Walker assisting in his parole at that time and giving him steady employment for a year afterward and having to sign a report for him every month, showing he was working. An effort is being made to locate the loot stolen from Colonel Walker's home, but so far they have had no success.

Mrs. James Koger of Paducah, sister of Mrs. R. M. Isler of this city and well known to many Hickman people, suffered a stroke of paralysis on Thursday of last week and was unconscious for several days. Her condition is quite serious.

O. K. BARBER SHOP REMODELED.

The O. K. Barber Shop and the City Barber Shop have consolidated and have prepared to take care of the barber business in the O. K. shop which has been remodeled and considerably enlarged. Six chairs have been installed in the new shop and six experienced barbers will be in the shop to wait on the customers.

Mrs. J. B. Houseley and little son, of Nashville, are visiting friends in the city.

BIG MAJORITY FOR SCHOOL BONDS

Vote Almost Ten to One in Favor of Issue of $30,000 Bonds.

The school bond election Saturday in the Hickman School District exceeded the hopes of even its most enthusiastic supporters in its passage. The final vote as recorded in the county clerk's office is 394 for and 42 against, or almost ten to one. Old Hickman, second ward, led the precincts for the issue with 141 for and one against.

The vote by precincts is:

Precinct	Yes	No
Old Hickman, 1st Ward	140	15
Old Hickman, 2nd Ward	141	1
East Hickman	52	16
South Hickman	35	2
West Hickman	26	8
Total	394	42

This means that bonds in the sum of $30,000 will be issued for the building of new school buildings in the Hickman School District, and it is encouraging to the school authorities of the city to see the voters show their interest so conclusively in the welfare of the school children of the district.

Many of our neighboring cities have passed school bond issues recently but we have heard of none of them who have voted school bonds by such a tremendous majority.

JNO. W. ROGERS DIED THURSDAY

Life of Beloved Old Citizen Brought to a Close.

The useful life of one of Hickman's oldest citizens was brought to a close last Thursday afternoon at three o'clock when John W. Rogers succumbed to the infirmities incident to old age, after spending the last years of his life as an invalid.

"Uncle Jack" as he was devotedly known by his friends here was of a pioneer family in this section and for over forty years he had been closely allied with the business of the city maintaining throughout his career a reputation for straightforwardness and honesty unswayed by a single blemish.

The deceased was born December 22, 1840, in Weakley County, Tenn., near Dresden. When a small boy he moved with his father and family to Harrison County, Texas, where most of his childhood and early manhood were spent. At the beginning of the Civil War he volunteered for service in behalf of his beloved southland, and was badly wounded at the battle of Fort Donaldson. After recovering from his wounds, he re-enlisted in Bedford's division, Forest's Cavalry, and served valiantly until the surrender.

He was married December 14, 1871, to Miss Lou M. Cowgill, a daughter of the Rev. N. N. Cowgill, who came here in 1842 and established the Episcopal Church in the city. She is a sister of J. W. Cowgill of this city.

They came to Hickman in 1876, where he entered the grocery business, in which he continued for many years as sole proprietor as well as in the firms, Ledford & Rogers and Jno. W. Rogers & Son.

He is survived by his wife, two sons, J. N. Rogers, of Dumas, Ark., and Cowgill Rogers, of Indianapolis; two daughters, Mrs. Roy Clark and Miss Nell Rogers, both of Hickman.

The funeral services were conducted Friday afternoon by Dr. W. F. Renneberg, rector of St. Paul's Church, of which church the deceased was a devoted and conscientious member.

"Uncle Jack" has gone, but he has left as an heritage the memory of a life well spent, a career of usefulness and honorable living and service to his fellow man which will survive him as an inspiration to those who are so well acquainted with his excellent traits.

STRAWBERRY GROWERS TO MEET SATURDAY

The members of the newly organized Strawberry Growers' Association and the farmers of this section who intend to plant strawberries this year are urged to be present at a meeting of the association to be held in the Farm Bureau office Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. At this meeting it will be ascertained how many acres of strawberries will be planted and how many plants it will be necessary to order. The order for the plants will be sent in Saturday night and therefore all those who intend to plant strawberries this year must have their order in to the farm bureau office at the meeting Saturday afternoon.

CASH IN ADVANCE.

In the future all local advertising including readers and classified ads will be strictly cash in advance at this office unless you have a running account with us. This is done to eliminate the large amount of bookkeeping which the credit system in dealing with these small ads entails upon us. Remember this and be prepared to pay cash in advance when you want such matter published. Our prices on this matter are: For classified ads, one cent a word; for other local advertising, ten cents a line; no ads are taken for less than 25 cents.

An oven which can be attached to the exhaust of an automobile has been perfected.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Harriet Field, twenty-eight years old and beautiful, is the social secretary of the Harriestown, Pa., belle, Mrs. Isabella Carter, at "Crowlands." Richard Carter, a home, and governor of 15-year-old Nina Carter, Ward, twenty-four years old and impressionable, fancies himself in love with his mother's attractive secretary, Mrs. Carter's latest "affair" is with young Anthony Pope, and the youth is taking it very seriously.

CHAPTER II.—Presiding over the teas this summer afternoon, Harriet is profoundly disturbed by the arrival of a visitor, Royal Blondin. Next day, at a tea party in the city, Blondin makes himself agreeable to Nina, and leaves a deep impression on the unsophisticated girl.

CHAPTER III.—Harriet's agitation over the appearance of Blondin at "Crowlands" is explained by the fact that he had been a disturbing element in her life ten years before, and she fears him. The man is an avowed adventurer, living on the gullibility of the idle rich. He frankly announces to Harriet his intention of marrying Nina, who, as the daughter of the wealthy Richard Carter, is a highly desirable "catch," and urges her to aid him. She is in a sense in his power, and after pleading with him to abandon his scheme agrees to follow a policy of neutrality.

CHAPTER IV.—Harriet visits her married sister, Linda Lavenport, with whom she had had her home during her unfortunate acquaintance with Blondin, and tells her of his reappearance. The two women realize the unscrupulous nature of the man, view the future with apprehension.

CHAPTER V.

Harriet slept in the room with Julia and Josephine that night, or rather tossed and lay wakeful there. At about two o'clock the wind streamed mercifully in, hot and thick, but prophetic of rain, and Harriet, wondering about to make windows fast, encountered Linda, on the same errand. When the worst of the crackling and flashing was over, the girl glanced at her watch. Three o'clock, but she could sleep now. She sank deeply into dreams, not to stir until Linda's alarm clock, hastily smothered, thrilled at seven, and the small girls rose with cheerful noise, to let streams of hot sunshine upon her face. Immediately after breakfast the two small girls attacked their Saturday morning's work with a philosophic vigor that rather touched their aunt. Fred had hurried away after his hasty meal; the boys were turned out into the backyard, which Pip was expected to rake while he watched his small brother.

Harriet's heart ached deeply for them all as she watched the Jersey marshes from the car window a few hours later. Josephine was to be a stenographer when she finished high school, and little Julia had expressed an angelic ambition to teach a kindergarten class some day. Nina, at their ages, had her pony, her finishing school, her little silk stockings, and her monogrammed ivory toilet set, her trip to England and France and Italy with her mother and brother and grandmother.

Suppose that she, Harriet, was right in suspecting that Ward's feeling was more than the passing gallantry of a light-hearted boy? It would be a nine-days' wonder, his marriage at twenty-two with his mother's secretary, more than four years his senior. But after that? After that there would be nothing to say or do. Young Mr. and Mrs. Ward Carter would establish themselves comfortably, and the elder Carters would visit them; Isabella absorbed as usual in her own mysterious thoughts, and Richard Carter—

Harriet's thoughts, none too comfortable up to this point, stopped here, and she flushed. She would not enjoy telling Richard that she was to marry his son. Those keen eyes would read her through and through, and while her father-in-law might love her, and see her beauty and charm with all the rest of the world, Harriet knew that she must begin an actual campaign for his esteem on her wedding day. The prospect had an unexpected piquancy. She had little fear of its outcome. She would make Ward Carter a wife for whom his father must come to feel genuine gratitude and devotion. There would be children, there would be hospitality and music and a garden. And Ward should seriously settle down to his business, whatever it might be, and show himself a worthy son of his clever father.

"Why not—why not?" Harriet asked herself, as she reached Madame Carter's pretentious apartment house, and was whisked upstairs. She was to meet Nina here, and she glanced about for the big limousine at the curb, as an indication that the old lady might be ready to accompany them back to Crowlands. But there was no car in sight. The maid's first statement was that Miss Carter had gone home with her brother, and then Madame Carter came magnificently into the room.

"Well, our bird has flown!" said the old lady. Harriet could see that she was pleased about something.

"Gone home with Ward?" Harriet asked. Madame Carter never shook hands with her; there was conscious superiority in the little omission. She sank into a chair, and Harriet sat down.

"Ward and his friend, this Mr. Blondin," Madame Carter said. "A very interesting—a most unusual man. A very good family, too—excellent old family. Yes. Nina assured us that she had to wait and go home with her Daddy, but that—" Madame Carter gave Harriet a deeply significant smile—"but that didn't seem to please Somebody very much!" she added. "So I told Nina I thought Granny would be able to make it all right with Daddy, and off the young people went."

She rocked, with a benignly triumphant expression, and a complacent rustle of silken skirts. Harriet, beneath an automatic smile, hid a troubled heart. Royal was losing no time. Ward his innocent instrument, and this fatuous old lady of course playing his game for him!

Harriet saw that she was pleased and flattered by an older man's apparent admiration of Nina; and that she would further the girl's first definite affair in every way that lay in her power. It was maddening; it was exasperating beyond words. An honest warning would have merely flattered her with its implication of her importance; ah, no, Isabella and Harriet might try to hold the child back—but Granny knew girl nature better than either of them!

"Well, then, I must follow them home," Harriet said, pleasantly. "You don't come back tonight?"

To this Madame Carter very pointedly made no answer; her plans were not Miss Field's business.

"The child is growing up!" the old lady said, smiling at some thought. "Well, we must look for love affairs now!"

Harriet felt that there was small profit in following this line of conversation. She glanced at her twisted wrist.

"I think I will make that two o'clock train, Madame Carter, unless there is some errand I might do for you?" she said respectfully.

This courtesy, from a beautiful young woman to an old one, always antagonized Madame Carter. Harriet knew that she was casting about for some honeyed and venomous farewell, when the muffled thrill of the bell came to them, and the footsteps of Ella were heard. Immediately afterward Richard Carter came quickly in.

He met Harriet at the door. "How are you, Miss Field? Tell Nina to hurry; I've got about five minutes!" he said, pleasantly.

"Don't keep Miss Field; she is making her train!" said his mother, coming forward under full sail, and laying both hands about his. "I'll explain about Nina."

Richard Carter gave his mother the peculiarly warm smile that was especially her own.

"Went on with Ward, eh?" he said, in his hearty voice. "That's all right, then. Oh, Miss Field!" he called, after Harriet's discreetly retreating back, "the car's downstairs. Wait for me there; I'll run you home in half the time the train takes. I'm playing in the tennis finals, Mother—"

Harriet, turning for just a nod and smile, heard no more. But as she entered the lift, the girl said to herself, with a passionate sort of gratitude: "Oh, I like you! You're the only genuine and unselfish and kind-hearted one in the whole crowd!"

She went down to the street, and saw the small car waiting. He was driving himself today. With a great sense of comfort and relaxation Harriet got into it, and was comfortably established, and tucked in snugly, when Richard came down. He smiled at seeing her, got into his own seat; the machine slipped smoothly into motion, the hot and sordid streets began to glide by.

"Ever think how illuminating it would be, Miss Field, if we kept a list of the things that are worrying us, and read 'em over a few weeks later?"

"I suppose so!" the girl said, a little surprised, and yet with fervor. "We'd have a fresh bunch then, and be worrying away just as hard!"

The spontaneous response in her tone made Richard Carter laugh.

Harriet was content to enjoy this restful interval between the hurry and crowding of Linda's house and the currents and cross-currents that she must encounter at Crowlands. She watched the green country go by, the trees silent and heavy with their rich foliage, the villages blazing with the last June roses.

They flew by the great gates of the country club, and turned in past Crowlands lodge, and Harriet got out at the steps, and turned her happy, flushed face toward the man to thank him. Whatever she saw in his face as he smiled and nodded at her pleased her, for she went upstairs saying again to herself, "Oh, you're real—you're honest—I like you!"

It was delightful to get back into the familiar atmosphere, to catch the fragrance of flowers in the orderly gloom downstairs, to take off her hat and her hot, dusty clothing, and have a leisurely hot bath; to put on fresh and fragrant summer wear, and to go downstairs presently, rejoicing in being young and comfortable, and tremendously interested in life. The significance of Richard Carter's parting look, its honest admiration and friendliness, augmented by her own glance at a chance mirror on her way upstairs, stayed with her pleasantly.

At one end of the terrace there was an awning whose shade fell upon the brick flooring and the jars of bloom:

Men Descended From Cats.

John M. Tyler, professor emeritus of biology of Amherst college, has been looking into our beginnings and he thinks that in appearance and structure the cats were much better justified than the apes in aspiring to bipedal pre-eminence, and that on form they should have won the future and made certain the ultimate holding of all meetings of art and learning on the back fence.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

LOST DAYS

We wandered in the upland fields the long day through,
And home in blessed weariness together;
For love had put his spell upon the heart of you,
And we were glad of any sort of weather.
"Twine out to gather flowers!
A fig for summer showers!"
We only laughed to see the rain beat down across the day,
But, like the trampled clover,
Love's hours are past and over!
If only I had told you all I meant to say!
Another day we tried to put dull care to rout,
And revelled building castles of the morrow.
Your hand in mine, I led you from the slough of doubt,
And from the heights looked down on pain and sorrow.
No quest more fair and golden
Could kindred hearts embolden
Than this of ours while romance held reality at bay.
But love waits not for taking
When worlds are in the making—
If only I had told you all I meant to say!

ROUND HOUSE DEFIES WIND

But Lightning Routed Builder of Freak Dwelling in Little Town of the Ozarks.

At the very top of the hill in a little town of the Ozarks, stands the round house. It overlooks one of the most magnificent stretches of mountain, valley and river that Missouri affords. We climbed the hill in the blazing sun to get a picture and to hear the story.

The builder, we were told, had been in a Kansas cyclone, which blew away his house. So this round tower was to be proof against the angry winds. He reasoned, probably, that if, like the old negro mammy, it had no "side-ways" it couldn't blow down. It is built entirely of native stone, and has but one circular room below and one above.

Not long after it was completed, a terrible thunder storm swept the hills. A great tree just across the road from the new house was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The pawns of the elements moved on. What kind of shelter did he then seek? Perhaps a cave.

The house was vacant for a long time. When we visited it a family had just moved in, but it still wore a deserted appearance and an air of mystery.—Kansas City Star.

THE COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN

Preserve Them in Water Glass.

Market eggs are low at present and it is a good time to preserve them and hold them until the market gets better. An egg properly preserved in water glass is just as good as a fresh egg and the average person can't tell the difference. As a matter of fact, the surplus eggs we are now selling are now going into storage to be held for a better market. Why not you store them and get the profit? Eggs will soon be twice to three times as high as they are now and you can make a tremendous interest on your investment. The best method is as follows: Take a stone jar, any size you want, scald it out thoroughly, boil some water and when it is cool make your preservative by using nine quarts of boiled water to one quart of Water Glass. This mixture is now put into the sterilized jar and you are ready to put eggs into it. The jar should be kept in a cool place, preferably a cellar. The top should be covered with waxed paper to prevent loss of solution by evaporation. Eggs should be gathered up fresh, cleaned if dirty (with a solution of vinegar) and put into the water glass. There should always be as much as two inches of the solution over the top layer of eggs. You can put up a large number of eggs at a very small expense and sell these eggs for a 100 per cent profit later on.

Get Your Dip Ready.

Scab in sheep is caused by a very small mite that feeds upon the skin of the sheep and causes an irritation which results in the loss of the wool and a devitalized condition of the sheep. It is not a hard matter to get rid of scab. Dipping the sheep just after they are sheared will rid them of scab and of ticks and lice as well. The sheep should be dipped twice at intervals of eight days. There are many good commercial dips and directions usually accompany each dip. Nicotine Sulphate (or Block Leaf 40) is undoubtedly one of the most effective if properly handled, otherwise bad results may follow. There are still too many long tailed lambs in the county. Dock and castrate if you would get most out of them.

Don't Set'em Over The Bud.

A strawberry plant will not grow if it is set over the crown. They should be set so that the bud is just above the ground. They can best be set with a dibble or spade. Before setting it is well to prune the plants. All dead leaves should be removed and all green leaves but about two. If it is impossible to set the slips when they arrive they should be trenced out. The bundles should be broken and they should be spread out in a thin layer in a trench and dirt firmly packed around them. The bud should not be covered in this case however.

To Stop a Cough Quick

take HAYES' HEALING HONEY, a cough medicine which stops the cough by healing the inflamed and irritated tissues.

A box of GROVE'S O-PEN-TRATE SALVE for Chest Colds, Head Colds and Croup is enclosed with every bottle of HAYES' HEALING HONEY. The salve should be rubbed on the chest and throat of children suffering from a Cold or Croup. The healing effect of Hayes' Healing Honey inside the throat combined with the healing effect of Grove's O-Pen-Trate Salve through the pores of the skin soon stops a cough.

Both remedies are packed in one carton and the cost of the combined treatment is 35c. Just ask your druggist for HAYES' HEALING HONEY.

PICTURE PUZZLE GAME

Elsewhere in this issue will be found a large advertisement announcing a picture puzzle game arranged by the St. Louis Globe Democrat which will, no doubt, prove very interesting for our readers, and especially for the little folks. The contest consists in ascertaining how many objects or articles in the picture begin with the letter "B," and prizes are awarded to those finding the largest number. Our readers have already won liberal prizes as a result of competing in similar contests and there is no reason why some of the awards in this new picture puzzle game should not come to residents of this vicinity. Anyhow, there is nothing like trying.

KING OG'S BED A WHOPPER

—WAS FIFTEEN FEET LONG

Invention of the iron bed dates back to Biblical times. The first such bed is mentioned in the third chapter of the book of Deuteronomy:

"For only Og, King of Bashan, remained of the remnant of giants; behold, his bedstead was a bedstead of iron. . . . Nine cubits was the length thereof and four cubits the breadth of it, after the cubit of a man."

In the breezy vernacular of the day this was some bed. In ancient Egypt the cubit represented the length of a man's forearm from the elbow to the tips of the fingers. It varied between 20 and 21 inches. The bedstead of good King Og, therefore, was about seven feet wide and 15 feet long.

Cold settled in the muscles of the neck, arms or shoulder makes every movement painful. Use Ballard's Snow Liniment. It relieves the pain and relaxes the muscles. Three sizes, 30c, 60c and $1.20. Sold by all druggists.

PADUCAH DRUGGIST MAKES STATEMENT

J. C. Mendenhall, Evansville, Ind. "You ask if we are disposing of the one gross Mendenhall's Chill Tonic, we have been purchasing from you monthly at retail, as this is an unusual quantity for a retail druggist to sell. For your information will state that some of our best physicians are prescribing your tonic with better results than quinine or any medicine used for malaria, chills, fever, colds or gripe. We had a customer who was all run down, pale and emaciated, had a very bad cough. Some physicians pronounced his case consumption. One of our doctors prescribed your chill tonic for him and after taking it for some time he was fully restored to health. He had a cough and chronic malaria," Lang Bros. Remember we make chill tonic, black label, free from arsenic; also chill tonic, red label, containing 20 minims of Fowler's Solution of Arsenic to each fluid ounce. Arsenic is indicated in chronic malaria, anaemia, inactive liver and spleen, functional, nervous disorders and impoverished blood.

YEARS TOLD THEIR OWN TALE

In Her Plenitude of Power Proud Beauty Felt the Saddening Approach of Old Age.

Mercedes took a perfumed bath, steamed her face, dashed cold water on it, then massaged it; then she lay down and relaxed for an hour.

After that she manicured her nails, rubbed cold cream into her face, added powder and rouge, then a little more powder, arranged her permanently waved hair and donned her silken garments.

She looked at herself long and earnestly, turning slowly around before the long pier glass. She was well satisfied with herself. She was a trifle larger, rather mature, but not old looking, not in the least.

She crossed the ballroom floor, looking proud and regal. The mothers sighed in envy, the young society buds trembled in affright, and the women of her own age felt very old and faded. The men one by one gathered around her.

One of the youngest set came up, and she thought him callow and crude; a ladies' man of her father's age drew near and she thought him silly and childish; a man just old enough for her, rich, talented and successful, showed his admiration of her, but she thought him conceited and tiresome.

She stood before the pier glass again. She looked young and she was beautiful—but all men bored her.

She knew she was old.—Katherine Negley, in Judge.

Illinois Central System Shows Railroads Are Growing Safer Constantly

The railroads have been making an excellent record in the reduction of fatalities. The reason for this is to be found in the fact that railway men have been trained to give safety precedence over all other things. To them the most familiar rule in standard book of railway rules reads: "In case of doubt or uncertainty, the safe course must be taken." While railway traffic has greatly increased in recent years, fatalities on the railroads have been decreasing. The Interstate Commerce Commission statistics on this subject for 1921 are not yet available, but the number of fatalities in 1920 was the smallest in twenty-two years, although 1920 was a record year for heavy traffic. The following comparisons with 1911, covering a 10-year period, tell their own story:

Year	Ton Miles Per Cent Increase	Passenger Miles Per Cent Increase	Total Fatalities Per Cent Decrease
1912	4.1	0.2 Dec	1.8 Inc.
1913	19.2	4.1	5.5 Inc.
1914	14.0	6.2	0.8
1915	9.6	2.5 Dec	17.1
1916	45.1	5.4	9.9
1917	57.9	19.7	3.0
1918	62.3	29.5	10.7
1919	45.8	40.4	32.9
1920	64.1	42.4	33.1

In 1920 the railroads carried 16,239,774 passengers to each passenger fatally injured in a train accident. The reader will better appreciate this comparison when it is understood that to load 16,239,774 passengers into 70-foot coaches having a capacity of eighty-eight passengers each would require 184,542 coaches, which would make up a train 2,446 miles long. Trespassing and automobile grade crossing accidents contribute heavily to the fatalities on the railroads. In 1920 trespassers fatally injured numbered 2,166, while occupants of automobiles fatally injured numbered 1,273. Together these accounted for nearly one half of all the fatalities on the railroads during the year. Not many would believe that there are nearly as many persons accidentally drowned in a year as are fatally injured on the railroads. The following table lists some of the commoner causes of fatalities in the United States in 1920:

Cause	Rate Per 100,000 Population
Falls	12.3
Automobiles	10.8
Burns (not conflagrations)	7.9
Railroads	6.6
Drownings	5.9

The table below shows that the Illinois Central System has maintained its position among the leading railroads in serving the public with transportation and, at the same time, that the fatalities on its lines have decreased in number substantially, the comparison being with 1911 and covering a 10 year period:

Year	Ton Miles Per Cent Increase	Passenger Miles Per Cent Increase	Total Fatalities Per Cent Decrease
1912	3.6	1.9 Dec	12.9 Inc.
1913	20.2	1.0 Dec	11.0 Dec.
1914	19.2	1.1	1.8 Inc.
1915	24.4	9.2 Dec	19.0
1916	45.6	3.2	34.7
1917	78.5	19.2	10.4
1918	99.3	24.6	15.3
1919	63.6	38.6	27.3
1920	113.4	43.0	30.7

The number of fatalities on the Illinois Central System in 1921 was the smallest in twenty-four years. In the road service of the Illinois Central System there has not been a passenger fatally injured in a train accident in more than four years. In the suburban service at Chicago only one passenger has been fatally injured in a train accident in the history of this service, which was established in 1856 and has grown until it now handles nearly thirty million passengers a year.

We believe the public will agree with us that the handling of a heavier business with a smaller number of fatalities is a barometer of railroad efficiency. The Illinois Central System pledges renewed effort toward rendering to the public a transportation service of safety and satisfaction and asks the cooperation of the public.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

C. H. MARKHAM,
President Illinois Central System.

How Many Objects Beginning With "B" Can You Find in This Picture?

Here's a picture containing several objects beginning with the letter "B." The object of the game is to find the most. Fifteen cash prizes will be given for the fifteen best list of words submitted in answer to this puzzle. The person sending in the largest and nearest correct list of "B-words" will win first prize; the second best, 2nd prize, etc.

EVERYBODY JOIN IN

Costs Nothing to Try

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat announces today a most fascinating and amusing puzzle game—a game in which everyone from grandpa to the little folks can take part. It really isn't a puzzle at all, as all the objects in the picture have been made perfectly clear. There are none hidden—you can see them at a glance. No need to turn the picture upside down or sideways, or tilt it, this way or that. Just write down as you see it, and when your list is completed send it in to The Globe-Democrat and try for the big prize. This is a puzzle game just for our readers outside the city of St. Louis.

Wouldn't it be grand to learn at the close of this puzzle game that you had been awarded first prize and was the proud possessor of $2,000? You can win $2,000, can't you? Two thousand dollars will enable you to have the hundred and one things you have longed for but have been unable to have. It will buy an automobile—a home of your own—a farm—diamonds—furs—pay off a mortgage. It will enable you to do lots of things you have wanted money for.

Start the "word-hunt" going tonight. It's lots of fun—and profitable too. Try it.

OBSERVE THESE SIMPLE RULES

1. Any person residing outside of St. Louis who is not an employee of The St. Louis Globe-Democrat or a member of an employee's family may submit an answer. It costs nothing to try.
2. All answers must be mailed on or before Saturday, April 22, 1922.
3. Answers should be written on one side of the paper only, numbering words 1, 2, 3, etc., with the sender's name and address in the upper right-hand corner of each sheet.
4. Only words found in the English dictionary will be counted. Compound, hyphenated or obsolete words will not be counted. Either the singular or plural can be used.
5. Words of the same spelling can be used only once, even though used to designate different objects. The same object may be named only once, however, any visible part of the object may also be named, and where more than one word is equally applicable to an object, any one of the words will count.
6. The person sending in the largest and nearest correct list of words will win first prize; second best, second prize, etc. One point will be allowed for each correct word sent in and one point deducted for each incorrect word or omission.
7. Candidates may co-operate in answering the puzzle, but only one prize will be awarded to any one household, nor will a prize be awarded to more than one of any group outside of the family where two or more have been working together.
8. In the event of a tie for any prize offered, the full amount of such prize will be paid to each participant.
9. All answers will receive the same consideration, regardless of whether or not a subscription to The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is sent in.
10. There will be three independent judges, having no connection with The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, who will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes at the end of the puzzle game. Webster's New International Dictionary will be used as reference, and participants agree to accept the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.
11. The judges will meet directly following the close of the contest and the prize winners and winning list of words will be published in The Globe-Democrat as quickly thereafter as possible.

Note:—If you want the big Sunday Globe-Democrat with the New Marvelous Invisible Ink Feature Section (magic right before your eyes) in addition to eight full pages of comics, Beautiful Art-Gravure Section, Magazine Section, etc., send $2.50 additional for each subscription.

Address communications and send all lists of words and remittances to Manager Picture Puzzle Game.

THE CALF PATH

One day through the primeval wood
A calf walked home as all good calves should.

But he made a trail all bent askew,
A crooked trail, as all calves do.
Since then three hundred years have

And I infer the calf is dead;
But still he left behind his trail,
And thereby hangs my mortal tale.

The trail was taken up next day
By a lone dog who passed that way;
And then a wise bell wether sheep,
Pursued the trail o'er vale and steep.

And drew the flock behind him, too,
As good bell wethers always do.
And from that day, o'er hill and glade,
Through those old woods a path was made.

And many men wound in and out,
And dodged and turned and bent about,
And uttered words of righteous wrath
Because 'twas such a crooked path;

But still they followed—do not laugh—
The first migrations of that calf.
And through this winding woodway stalked.

Because he wobbled when he walked.
This forest path became a lane,
That bent and turned and bent again,
This crooked lane became a road

Where many a poor horse with his load
Toiled on beneath the burning sun,
And traveled some three miles for one,
And men for two centuries and a half

Trod in the footsteps of that calf.
Each day a hundred thousand rout
Followed this calf about.
And o'er his crooked journey went
The traffic of a continent.

A hundred thousand men were led
By one calf near three centuries dead.

Ah, many things this tale might teach
But I am not ordained to preach.
—Sam Walter Floss.

To Stop a Cough Quick

take HAYES' HEALING HONEY, a cough medicine which stops the cough by healing the inflamed and irritated tissues.

A box of GROVE'S O-PEN-TRATE SALVE for Chest Colds, Head Colds and Croup is enclosed with every bottle of HAYES' HEALING HONEY. The salve should be rubbed on the chest and throat of children suffering from a Cold or Croup.

The healing effect of Hayes' Healing Honey inside the throat combined with the healing effect of Grove's O-Pen-Trate Salve through the pores of the skin soon stops a cough.

Both remedies are packed in one carton and the cost of the combined treatment is 35c.

Just ask your druggist for HAYES' HEALING HONEY.

CALOMEL IS A DANGEROUS DRUG

Next Dose May Salivate You, Loosen Teeth or Start Rheumatism.

Calomel is mercury; quicksilver. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tonic straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children, because it is perfectly harmless and cannot salivate.

MAY RUN FOR CLERK OF COURT OF APPEALS

In glancing over various newspapers of the state we notice the name of our old companion in ecstasy and misery in college, Emerson Beauchamp, of Russellville, mentioned as a probable candidate in the next state election for clerk of the Kentucky court of appeals.

For the past two sessions of that body he has been assistant clerk of the state senate, where his friendly manner with his excellencies has made him popular with all the senators. In politics he is one of the staunchest believers in the doctrines of democracy as laid down by Jefferson and Wilson we ever knew.

If anyone in the state knows "Dock" Beauchamp, we do, and it is this personal knowledge of his worth and his fitness to the position that will cause us to support him unqualifiedly if he can be prevailed upon to make the race.

His strong political connections throughout the state will make him a favorite for the nomination, and as a nominee, his wide circle of friends in the Third congressional district will help mightily in swinging the old state back into the democratic column.

HARRIET AND THE PIPER

and this afternoon it also shaded Isabelle, in a basket chair, and the big hound, and Tony Pope. Harriet cast them a passing glance, and wondered a little in her heart. The boy was handsome, and fascinating, and rich, but it was just a little unusual to have Isabelle so openly interested in any one.

Undefined and vague, this was still somewhere in the background of her thoughts as she returned to Crownlands, and when she met Ward Carter, wrestling with the engine of his own rather disreputable racing car, out in one of the clean, graveled spaces near the garage.

Harriet felt a little quickening of her pulses as she saw him. There was no mistaking the pleasure in his eyes as she came close.

"Spark plugs?" she asked, with the sympathy of one to whom the peculiarities of the car were familiar.

"She's fixed now; I've just cleaned 'em," Ward announced, flinging away his cigarette and straightening his back. "She'll go like a bird, now. Say, get in and try her, will you?" he asked, eagerly. "Come on—come on, be a sport!" But perhaps he was as much surprised as delighted when she very simply stepped into the low front seat. He gave her more than one sideways glance as they went dipping smoothly up and down the green lanes, and said to himself, "Gosh—when she crinkles those blue eyes of hers, and her mouth sort of twitches as if she wanted to laugh, she is a beauty—that's what she is!"

About a week later they met for a few moments in this very side garden. It was early evening, and twilight and moonlight were mingled over the silent roses, and the trimmed turf, and the low brick walls.

They came straight toward each other, and stood very close together, and he took both of Harriet's hands.

"Now, what is it—what is it?" the man said, quickly. "I've been waiting long enough. I can't stand it any longer! I can't go away tomorrow, perhaps for two weeks, and not know!"

"Ward," the girl faltered, lifting an exquisite face that wore, even in the faint moonshine, a troubled and intense expression, "can't we let it all wait until you get back?"

"Why, Harriet," and his arm went about her shoulders, and he bent his face over hers, "Harriet, why not let me go happy?" he pleaded.

"You'll see a dozen younger girls at the Bellamys' camp," Harriet reasoned, "girls with whom it would be infinitely more suitable."

"Please!" he interrupted, patiently. And almost touching her warm, smooth cheek with his own, and coming so close that to raise her beautiful eyes was to find his only a few inches away, he added, fervently, "You love me and I love you—isn't that all that matters?"

Did she love him? Harriet hoped, when she reviewed it all in the restlessness of the night, that she had thought, in that moment, that she did. It was wonderful to feel that strong, eager arm about her, there was a sweet and heady intoxication in his passion, even if it did not awaken an answering passion in return. Under all her reasoning and counter-reasoning in the night there crept the knowledge that she had known that this was coming, had known that only a few days of encouraging friendliness, only a few appealing glances from uplifted blue eyes, and a few casual touches of a smooth brown hand must bring this hour upon her. And back of this, and of a man's joy in winning the woman he loved, she had seen the hazy future of prosperity and beauty and ease, the gowns and cars and homes, the position of young Mrs. Ward Carter.

She had let him turn her face up, in the strengthening moonlight, and kiss her hungrily upon the lips, and she had sent him in to his dinner half-wild with the joy of knowing himself beloved. Harriet had gone in, too, shaken and half-frightened, and with his last whispered prophecy ringing in her ears.

"Wait a year—rot! I'll go, to the Bellamys, because I promised to, but the day I come back, and that's two weeks from today, we'll tell everyone, and this time next year you will have been my wife for six months!"

CHAPTER VI.

A most opportune lull followed, when Harriet Field had time to collect her thoughts, and get a true perspective upon the events of the past week. Nina was leaving for a visit to Amy Hawkes, at the extremely dull and entirely safe Hawkes mansion, where four unmarried daughters constituted a chaperonage beyond all criticism. Isabelle Carter was giving and attending the usual luncheons and dinners, her husband absorbed in an especially important business deal that kept him alternate nights in the city. The house was quiet, the domestic machinery running smoothly, the weather hot, sulphurous and enervating.

She dined as usual alone, that evening, and was surprised, at about eight o'clock, to receive the demure notification from Rosa that Mrs. Carter would like to see her. With hardly an instant's delay she went downstairs.

On the terrace outside the drawing room windows they were at a card table; Richard, looking tired and hot in rumpled white, Isabelle exquisite in silver lace, and young Anthony Pope. Near by, Madame Carter majestically fingered some illustrated magazines. It appeared that they wanted bridge; it was too hot to eat, too hot to dance at the club, too hot—said Isabelle pathetically—to live!

Obligingly, Harriet took her place, cut for the deal. But her eyes had not fallen upon the group before she sensed that something was wrong, and she had a moment's flutter of the heart for fear some one suspected her that she was under surveillance. Had Royal—had Ward—

She turned a card, took the deal, entered into the game with spirit. Richard's first words to her were reassuring; if there was constraint here, she was not involved in it.

"No trump—says Little Miss Field. Well, that doesn't seem to frighten me. Two spades."

"I think we might try three diamonds, Miss Field," Anthony said, gravely and pleasantly, and Harriet felt herself acquitted of any apprehension in that direction as well. It only remained for Isabelle to show friendliness.

"Du hast diamanten and perlen, you two. I can see that! You're down, Harriet!" Mrs. Carter said, thoughtfully. Harriet began thoroughly to enjoy herself. If they were all furious, at least it was not with her. She speculated, as she gathered in her tricks. Was it conceivable that Richard did not enjoy the discovery of the tete-a-tete dinner? But Isabelle had often been equally indiscreet, and he had never seemed to resent it before. Harriet knew that Isabelle was ill at ease; she suspected that Tony was furious. The old lady was obviously quivering with baffled interest and curiosity.

After three rubbers the game ended suddenly; Richard said he had some letters to write, and was keeping Fox waiting in the library; Anthony scribbled a check, said brief and unfriendly good-nights; Isabelle merely raised passionate dark eyes to his. She was languidly gathering in her spots when the lights of his car flashed yellow on the drive and he was gone.

Immediately afterward Richard Carter said good-night to his mother and wife, and went in to his study. Madame Carter followed him in, and went upstairs, but Isabelle sat on moodily shuffling and reshuffling the cards, in the bright soft light of the terrace lamps.

"Wait a minute, Harriet," she said, briefly, and Harriet obediently loitered. But Isabelle seemed to have nothing to say. Her eyes were on the cards, her beautiful breast, exposed in the low-cut silver gown, rose and fell stormily, and Harriet saw that she was biting her full under lip, as if anger seethed strong within her.

"Come upstairs to my room; I want to speak to you!" Isabelle said, suddenly. Harriet followed her upstairs, and they entered the beautiful boudoir together. Here Isabelle dropped into a chair and stared dully ahead of her, a queen of tragedy.

Germaine came forward, evidently more accustomed to this mood than Harriet was. Like a flash the high-heeled shoes, the silver gown, and the brocaded stays were whisked away, and a cool, loose silk robe enveloped Isabelle, and she took a deep, cretonned chair by the window. The lights were lowered, Isabelle nodded Harriet to the opposite chair.

"I ask you," she said, with a great breath of anger restrained, "I ask you if any woman in the world could stand it! You saw the way Mr. Carter acted. You saw him make me ridiculous—make a fool of me! The boy will never come to the house again!"

"Oh, I don't think that!" Harriet said, in honesty.

"Mr. Carter stalked in upon us, at dinner—" his wife said, broodingly. She fell into thought, and suddenly burst out, "Harriet, my heart aches for that boy! My God—my God—what have I done to him!"

She rested her white full arms on the dressing table, and covered her face with her hands. Harriet saw the frail silk of the dressing gown stir with her sudden dry sobbing.

"My God—if I could cry!" Isabelle said, turning. And Harriet realized, with a shock, that she was not acting. "Mr. Carter only sees what I see," she added, "that it must stop. But I am afraid it will kill him. He isn't like other men. He—" She opened a drawer, fumbled therein. "Read that!" she said.

Harriet took the sheet of paper, pressed it open.

"My heart," she read, in Tony Pope's handwriting. "I will go away from you if I must. But it will be further than India, Isabelle, further than Rio or Alaska. While we two live, I must see you sometimes. Perhaps outside the world there is a place big enough for me to forget you!"

"Now—" said Isabelle, rising and beginning restlessly to walk the floor. "Now, what shall I do? Send him away to his death, or risk Mr. Carter's insulting him again, as he did tonight! Anthony Pope means it, Harriet—I know him well enough for that."

She fell silent. Germaine appeared with a tray, and began to loosen and brush the dark hair, and Isabelle went automatically to the business of creaming and rubbing, still shaken, but every minute more mistress of herself. With the thick, dark switch gone, Harriet was almost shocked by the change in the severely exposed forehead and face. Isabelle looked fully her age now, more than her age.

"Sweet!" said the mistress, somber-eyed still, and with a still heaving breast. "There was something else. Harriet—Gently, please, Germaine, my head aches frightfully. Oh, Harriet, will you see what this Blondin man wants with Nina? She tells me he suggested some sort of summer party in his roof garden; I don't know quite what it is. But her heart is set on it. They seem to understand each other—I always felt that when Nina's affairs did begin, she would pick out freaks like this! Don't—" Germaine had gone to the bathroom for a hot towel, and Isabelle dropped her voice, almost affectionately—"don't worry about this little scene, Harriet. It will be quite all right!"

"Oh, surely!" The companion's voice was light and cheerful; she went upstairs only pleasantly excited and thrilled. And at the breakfast table next morning Harriet could show the head of the house the same bright assurance. Richard had come downstairs early, and they had their coffee alone.

"Nina?" asked her father. "She comes back today," Harriet said. "Mrs. Carter is going to have her massage, so she won't be down. She asked you to remember that you are dining at the Jays' tomorrow. There's to be tennis at about four."

"Finally," he said, nodding, and went out to his car apparently well pleased with himself and his life. Harriet started for the Hawkes' with a philosophic reflection or two as to the ephemeral quality of married quarrels.

She brought Nina back at noon, a garrulous and complacent Nina, who could pity the elder Hawkes as girls who "never had admirers." When they reached the driveway of Crownlands, Harriet recognized the car that was already there, and said to herself that Anthony Pope would join them for luncheon. But just as she and Nina were about to enter the cool, wide, dark doorway, Anthony himself passed them. He was almost running, and apparently did not see them. He ran down the shallow steps and sprang into his car, which scattered a spray of gravel as he jerked it madly about, and was gone before she and Nina had ended their look of surprise. Harriet went slowly upstairs, with a dim foreboding far back in her heart.

At about three, when Harriet and Nina were idling on the shady terrace, with the hound, the new magazines, and their books, Hansen brought one of the small closed cars to the side door. Five minutes later Isabelle, in a thin white coat, a veiled white hat, and with a gorgeous white-furred wrap over her arm, came out. Germaine was with her, carrying two shiny black suitcases. Isabelle, Harriet thought, looked superbly handsome, but Germaine had evidently been scolded, and had red eyes.

Isabelle came over to give her daughter a farewell kiss.

"Mrs. Webb has telephoned for me. ducky. Your father isn't coming home tonight, but have a happy time with Miss Harriet, and I'll be back in a day or two. Good-by, both of you. All right, Hansen!"

They swept away, leaving Harriet with a strange sense of nervousness and suspense. The summer air seemed charged with menace, and the silence that followed the noise of the car oddly ominous.

Madame Carter was on the terrace when they came back at five from an idle trip to the club, reporting that her son had just returned unexpectedly from the city, and had gone in to change for golf.

Nothing alarming here, yet Harriet experienced a sick thrill of apprehension. Something abnormal seemed to be the matter with them all this afternoon!

"Did you call me, Mr. Carter?" She hardly knew her own voice, as he came down the three broad steps from the house. Her hands felt cold, and she was trembling.

"Do you happen to know where Hansen is, Miss Field?"

"Driving Mrs. Carter to the Webbs' at Great Barrington," the girl answered, readily. "Mrs. Carter left in a hurry. She did not expect you tonight. Hansen ought to be back at about seven, I should think."

He was not listening to her; abruptly left her. When Harriet went into the house she saw nothing of him. She made her usual little round, spoke briefly to a maid about some fallen daisy petals, consulted with the housekeeper as to the new cretonne covers. A man was to come and measure those covers this very afternoon—perhaps this was he, modestly waiting at the side door.

But no, this man briefly and simply asked to be shown to Mr. Carter, remarking that he was expected. He disappeared into the library; Harriet saw no more of him for an hour, when he silently appeared beside her, and asked to see the chauffeur Hansen, as soon as he came.

Richard brought the strange man to the dinner table; but there was nothing in that to make the dinner so unnatural. To be sure Richard ate little, and spoke hardly at all; but this Mr. Williams was quite entertaining, and the old lady in good spirits.

At eight Hansen was back, presenting himself in his dusty road-coat; Mr. Carter immediately drew him with Williams into the library. Nina loitered up to bed, but the old lady and Harriet remained downstairs. They did not like, but they sometimes amused, each other. Suddenly came the summons: would Miss Field please step into the library?

Hansen was going out as she came in; Richard was at the big flat-topped desk, the man Williams standing somewhat in shadow. Harriet's heart leaped; they were going to ask her about Royal.

"Just a moment, Miss Field," Richard said. "Will you sit down?" And as Harriet, looking at him in frightened curiosity, did so, he began quietly: "We are in some trouble here, Miss Field. I hardly know how to tell you what we fear. Did you notice anything strange about—Mrs. Carter's—manner today?"

"I thought I did," Harriet admitted. "Did you think of any reason for it?"

Harriet gave the stranger a glance that made him an eavesdropper.

"I fancied that it was connected with—with what distressed her last night, Mr. Carter."

"You may speak before Mr. Williams," Richard said. He looked down; was silent. "I asked him to help me," he added, slowly. "Was young Mr. Pope here today?"

"This morning, I don't know how long," Harriet said, with a great light, or darkness, breaking in upon her mind, "he was leaving when Nina and I came home."

"Do you know who took the telephone call from Mrs. Webb?"

"No, because nobody did. No person named Webb called from Great Barrington, or anywhere else, today," said Williams, breaking in decidedly, his voice a contrast to Richard's hesitating tones. "As a matter of fact, Hansen didn't drive to Great Barrington. Two miles from your gate here, Mrs. Carter gave him other directions."

"What directions?" Harriet asked, antagonized by his manner, and feeling her cheeks get red. The man evidently had small respect for womanhood.

"He drove to New London," Richard supplied. "Pope's yacht is there."

His manner was very quiet, he spoke almost wearily, but Harriet felt as if a cannon had exploded in the study.

"I've had New London on the wire," said Mr. Williams. "Mr. Pope had been getting ready for a cruise. The chances are that they have already weighed anchor."

"On the other hand," Richard said, glancing at his watch, "we have an excellent prospect of finding them there. I was not supposed to come home until tomorrow night. I found Mrs. Carter's message at five, twenty-four hours earlier than she expected me to. Williams may be mistaken, of course," he finished, with a glance at the detective.

"Not likely!" said Williams, with a modest shrug.

"However, even if he is right," Richard resumed, "the chances are that they are still there, and if they are, I will bring—my wife back with me tonight. Meanwhile, I leave the house in your care, Miss Field. I needn't tell you that my mother and Nina must be kept absolutely ignorant of what we suspect. You'll know what to tell them, in case I should be longer away. If our calculations are wrong, there's no telling where I may follow Mrs. Carter. I leave this end of things to you!"

"I'm sorrier than I can say," she said, huskily.

"I know you are! It's—" Richard passed his hand over his forehead—"it's utter madness, of course. But, please God, we can keep it all hushed up. She has Germaine with her; Hansen I can trust. We're off now, Miss Field. I'll keep you informed if I can."

Harriet went back to the drawing room with her heart big with pride. He had mentioned Hansen and Germaine, but he knew that he could trust her! The event was sensational enough. But back of the excitement lay the joy of being needed and being trusted.

Team Work

We hear much these days about "TEAM-WORK."

Mostly it is used in connection with athletic affairs. We are told of wonderful victories—when every member of a team PULLS TOGETHER—when someone doesn't go off trying to make a star play, at the expense of the others.

Trouble is that we limit the word to our recreation—sport—athletics. We should follow through; think, use, live team-work in everything we do.

If team-work is a winner in sports, then team-work is good in family affairs—and we all know how the household thrives wherein every member has a shoulder to the wheel.

If team-work is good in the family then it is good in our work—the commercial organization or unit where we earn our daily bread.

If team-work is good in our work—then team-work is good for our neighborhood affairs—our community—our town.

And right there, friends, is where we can make the greatest showing—when we ALL practice team-work in the development and growth of OUR town and county.

When the merchants of this town spend money for advertising space to send you a message of economy—savings—bargains—that message should be read. They've invested thousands of dollars in goods to supply you—and without one guarantee that you will buy.

To earn your money here, then take it to the big city store—or send it to the mail order house—neither of which contributes one cent to the upbuilding of this community—is not team-work. Read the advertisements in this paper today, then patronize our home merchants.

HOME-SPENT DOLLARS mean team-work.

Misses Onnie and Tommie Fleming and brother, Billie, were in Hickman recently.

Mrs. Jeff Davis of near Clinton, has returned home after spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Elmer Robertson.

Mrs. W. W. Prentiss received a message on Thursday, March 23 about noon that her brother, Finis K. Bradley, of Woodland Mills, was expected to live only a few hours. As Mr. Prentiss was at Clinton on business, Mrs. Prentiss and son Rueben, accompanied by Mrs. A. M. Roper and W. H. Treas left immediately to attend his bedside. Mr. Bradley died that night about 2 o'clock after an illness of several months. He was born near Mud Creek on Feb. 12, 1867, died March 23, 1922, making him 55 years, one month and eleven days old at his death. He was first married to Miss Etta Stubblefield in 1887. To this union were born five children four of whom survive. Death came into this home in 1912 and claimed for its victim his precious companion, who was the joy of his life and his home. This separation saddened the home of this good man, but again he was married to another good woman, Miss Susie Fleming in 1914 which made another happy home and to them were born two children, one of whom survives. Mr. Bradley was a member of the Baptist Church and lived a faithful Christian life until the day of his death. He leaves to mourn his loss, his devoted wife and the following children: Mrs. Robert Murrell of Nashville, Thomas of Memphis, Earl of St. Louis, Everett of Parks, Texas; F. K. of Woodland Mills and one sister, Mrs. W. W. Prentiss of near Hickman, besides a host of other relatives and friends. Funeral services were held at the Baptist Church in Woodland Mills, Saturday March 25, by Rev. Stigler, pastor of that church. Interment was at Mt. Zion Cemetery.

There have been quite a number of flu cases in this district since our last writing, including the Roper District News correspondent.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Choate left Sunday for Shorter College at Rome, Ga., where they will visit their daughter, Miss Lois, and attend a debate in which she will be one of the speakers.

Martha Stevens Maddox had a tonsilectomy performed last Saturday. She underwent the operation wonderfully well and is making a rapid recovery.

Chinese Widows Seldom Marry.

In China the remarriage of widows is regarded as an impropriety, and in wealthy families is seldom practiced, but among the poorer classes necessity often compels a widow to seek another breadwinner.

Better is a dry morsel, and quietness therewith, than a house full of sacrifices with strife.

DIFFERENT WAYS WITH MEATS

Some of the dishes may be made from leftover meats or the tough portions.

Chili Stew.

Take one and one-half pounds of round steak, one and one-half tablespoonsful of butter, one and one-half tablespoonsful of olive oil, six tablespoonsful of chopped onion, four cloves of garlic, one and one-half tablespoonsful of Worcestershire sauce, three teaspoonsful of chili powder, two teaspoonsful of salt, three cupsful of canned tomatoes, one and one-half tablespoonsful of flour. Grind the steak or cut in small pieces. Melt the butter, add the oil in a deep frying pan; add onion, garlic and fry till a light brown. While frying add the Worcestershire sauce, chili powder and stir well. Pour in enough hot water to cover the bottom of the pan, add meat and almost cover with hot water. Cook slowly fifteen minutes, then add the tomato and salt. Blend the flour with a little tomato juice and add to the stew, then place in a fire-proof dish and bake in the oven for an hour. Serve with rice or boiled noodles.

Veal Pie.

Cook a piece of the neck of veal or any cheap cut until tender with a small piece of salt pork. Cut in bits and arrange in a baking dish, add cream, seasonings, cover with a rich biscuit crust and bake until brown.

Ragout of Mutton.

Cut cold roast or boiled mutton in one-inch pieces. Take one tablespoonful of butter, add one tablespoonful of flour, one-half pint of stock, season with salt and pepper, three drops of tabasco sauce, a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a pinch of asafoetida. Add the mutton, heat until boiling hot, then add one tablespoonful of currant jelly and one tablespoonful of orange juice. Serve hot.

Kidneys.

Split the kidneys in halves, trim off the fat and sinews. Cut in small pieces. Fry one small onion in two tablespoonsful of butter, add the kidneys, cook three minutes, add one tablespoonful of flour, one-half cupful of water or stock, one small glass of jelly, salt and pepper to taste. Stir, add a pinch of asafoetida and serve at once.

MORE THAN MERE BUSINESS

Modern Railroaders Have Been Lifting to a Sphere Little Short of the Miraculous.

A cycle of railroad history has revolved before our very eyes. Three epochal golden spikes (at least) have been hammered in by (at least) three glided sledges—and all within the span of a little more than half a century.

What is probably to be the last great "trunk railroad" in North America is being built by the United States in Alaska. This "government railway" had its first spike, a gold one, sledged on April 29, 1917, by Martha White.

Another gold spike was driven on that momentous day, May 10, 1909, near Ogden, Utah, when the transcontinental Union Pacific line was completed, uniting beyond question of chance the fortunes of the Atlantic and Pacific sides of the republic.

The gold spike custom (or habit as it came to be with the irrepressible builders of the continent) began in 1852 to assume significance. For upon Christmas eve, not only the nation's but the world's first "trunk line" was completed at a little forgotten hamlet near Wheeling, W. Va., Roseb's Rock.

The romance of railroads! Who that lies him down to slumber in New York intending and expecting to arise refreshed in Chicago, can dare affirm that railroading is a business, a commercial enterprise! It is, rather, a miracle an Aladdin's phantasy—Christian Science Monitor.

LIKE PAGES FROM HISTORY

Deeds of Modern Greeks Similar to Those of Their Ancestors of Many Centuries Ago.

Greeks are reported to be crossing over into Asia Minor to resist the forces of Mustafa Kemal's army and take possession of the territory given them by the treaty of Sevres, an expedition which recalls the memorable crossing of this people 3,000 years ago, the subsequent siege of Troy, and the story of the wanderings of Aeneas, the historic founder of the early Roman race.

About an hour from the sea, near the Dardanelles, the ruins of the ancient city of Troy stand upon an eminence looking out over the plains where her immortal sons fell in her defense. At its foot the Scamander winds to the sea, says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

Excavations on the site have revealed nine cities, built one upon the top of the other in times past. The sixth from the bottom of these is the Troy of which Homer and Virgil sang. Today there stands little to tell of the might of the former Priam and Paris and the splendor which the beautiful Helen caused to be tumbled into dust.

Saccharin Discovered by Accident.

Saccharin, 500 times as sweet as sugar, and much in demand during the war, was discovered, according to the Basler Nachrichten, by an instructor in Johns Hopkins university. The story runs as follows:

In the summer of 1878 the discoverer, C. Fahlberg by name, was trying to restore certain organic bodies. At the dinner table at the close of a busy day he noticed that a piece of bread tasted uncommonly sweet. It occurred to him at once that the sweetness came from his hands, though he had carefully washed them before sitting down to eat. He hurried back to his laboratory and tasted all the glasses he had used in his experiments. One of them he found exceptionally sweet. He analyzed the remaining drops and found that they were a derivative of benzol. In 1884 he set up an experimental factory for the manufacturing of saccharin in New York.

Police File Baby's Picture.

Kidnapers are going to have a hard time if they bother Paul Everitt Collins, three years old, of Denver.

He climbed upon the stool in front of the camera at the central police station the other day and was photographed. Then he thrust his fingers into the recording ink and impressed his finger prints for the Bertillon records.

But he is not a criminal. Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Collins, who recently adopted him, were with him, and they asked that these records be made to insure him against kidnaping. Both said they feared some one might attempt at some time to take him away from them. The records will be filed with the police at the county recorder's office, they said.—Rocky Mountain News.

Increase in Elk Herd.

A good increase from the survivors of the southern Yellowstone or Jackson Hole elk herd is looked for this year by officials of the bureau of biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, in view of the unusually favorable winter just past. Last year's rains, it is said, produced a plentiful growth of feed on the ranges, and as a result the elk are reported to be in excellent condition, with the prospect of only a normal death rate instead of a repetition of the mortality of the winter of 1919-20, due to lack of forage and a severe winter.

WATER OUT OF ALL THE STORES

Rapid Fall Recorded on River Here Until Monday Morning.

Up until Monday morning a rapid fall in the river was recorded each day with the result that by that time water was out of every business house in town. The heavy rains of the latter part of last week, however, caused a rise in some of the tributaries with the result that Monday and Tuesday the river was on a stand, with a very slight rise recorded Tuesday. Wednesday a slight drop was noted, and it is believed that a steady recession will occur from now on.

Water still covers the N. C. & St. L. tracks at the station and the trains on that line are continuing to stop at the water tank below the station. The C. M. & G. continues to run one train a day owing to the water covering the tracks on their line near Miston. This train leaves every morning and returns at night, taking care of both the passenger and freight business.

With the water completely out of the stores on Clinton street, the business of the city is returning to normalcy after the check it received from the high water.

The merchants have all removed their scaffolding and gotten rid of the sediment which the high water always leaves in the stores and have gone over their stock completely and are ready again to go after the business.

Clinton street has suffered severely from the high water and the strong current which went down that street. Some holes have been washed out and the surface of the street has been impaired, but some work has been done on the street so that traffic will not suffer.

MUSIC CLUB ORGANIZED.

A very enthusiastic meeting was held Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Mena Diestelbrink for the purpose of organizing a music club.

The chief aim of this club will be to create an interest and develop a greater appreciation of music. The need of such an organization has been felt for sometime, for in this day when Jazz music seems to be the rage, it is for the music lovers to point out the real beauty of great music.

Through the efforts of this Club it is hoped that well known musical artists will be brought to the town from time to time.

The following officers were elected: President, Miss Esther Bartlett; Vice-President, Mrs. Besse Curdin; Secretary, Mrs. Remmenberg; Treasurer, Miss Mary Hardy Ligon.

Misses Fuqua, Barnes and Bondurant were appointed as a committee to draft by-laws to be submitted at the next meeting of the Club on Thursday evening, April 13th, at the home of Mrs. H. L. Amberg. It is hoped that a full membership of all music lovers and musical talent will be present.

Miss Mildred Neighbors, who was painfully injured in an automobile accident in Emis, Texas, where she is visiting, is rapidly recovering from her injuries, according to a letter from her to her mother here. Although yet unable to walk, it is believed that she will be well enough to return to Hickman in the next few weeks.

A DOG'S JUDGMENT

In Toby's eyes, so deep and brown,
I see myself enshrined;
He cares not if my hat and gown
Be made in country or in town,
I'm perfect to his mind!

What though I gain unwished for pounds
And mourn the fact with sighs?
For worry Toby sees no grounds,
And should I grove by leaps and bounds,
I'm perfect in his eyes.

To him, the flaws that humans trace,
Are graces wondrous fine,
And if he can but find a place,
Where turning, he may see my face,
The world is his and mine.

Gray hair and wrinkles pass him by,
With him time plays no part,
Youth is eternal to his eye,
Nor will that homage ever die—
I'm perfect in his heart.

You who are old and plain and worn,
To whom the world seems cold,
Go get a dog and be reborn,
He'll think you're like the rosy morn.
Such solace is pure gold.

CONDITIONS IMPROVING

--but we have got to put in a full 10-hour day and an honest effort in whatever vocation we follow. Our corn, hogs and wheat have made nice advances recently, and we believe that if everybody will work harder and spend less this country will get back on its feet in the next twelve months. When we get our farmer friends south of town to go into the truck and berry business on a larger scale and the other sections of the county take care of the cotton, corn, wheat and alfalfa, we see no reason why Hickman shouldn't be back to normal times real soon.

"More joy and less ja'm," should be our motto.

MEADOW MICE DAMAGE TREES

Much Injury Can Be Prevented by Placing Poisoned Bait in Ordinary Tin Cans.

The heavy damage which meadow mice do every winter to young fruit trees may be prevented in a large measure if the farmer or orchardist will go systematically about ridding his orchards of the rodents, say the fruit men at the New York state college of agriculture.

The best preventive, according to the college, is the placing of poisoned bait. This bait, consisting of poisoned wheat or oat meal, will kill the mice, but great care needs to be used in placing it, or it will kill valuable birds and poultry.

The best way of distributing the poison is said to be to place a handful of the poisoned grain inside of a tin can, the cut lid of which is partly closed; then put under a board or brush pile in the field or orchard.

The mice ordinarily take shelter in such places and will find the bait even quicker than if it is thrown broadcast. It will likewise be protected from the weather, will retain its strength longer, and will be safe from birds and poultry.

The formula for poisoned bait which is recommended by the biological survey of the federal Department of Agriculture is as follows:

Mix thoroughly one ounce of powdered strychnin (alkaloid), one ounce powdered bicarbonate of soda, and ¼ ounce, or less, of saccharin. Put the mixture in a tin pepper box and sift it gradually over 50 pounds of crushed wheat, or 40 pounds of crushed oats, or 30 pounds of oat meal, in a metal tub, mixing the grain constantly so that the poison will be evenly distributed.

DAMAGE DONE BY LEAF MITE

Because of Protection Afforded in Summer Pests Must Be Destroyed During Winter.

There have been many inquiries concerning damage done by the pear-leaf blister mite. This is a minute mite that burrows into the tissues of the leaf and rapidly multiplies there. The first signs of its presence are small purplish or greenish blisters, which increase in size and numbers as the weather gets warmer. After the young mites mature they emerge from the blister and form new ones on the same leaf or on others. Later, if the mites are very abundant the leaves turn brown and drop off prematurely. In severe infestations trees are often nearly defoliated before mid-summer. Because the mites are protected by being under the surface of the leaf, spraying during the summer will have no effect on them. The mites winter over under the bud scales and can be destroyed by a dormant spray any time after the leaves fall until the tips of the new leaves show in the spring. Lime sulphur is most effective, but oil spray will control it. One spray every two or three years will keep the pest in check.

ADVANTAGES OF COVER CROP

Needed Organic Matter Is Added and if Leguminous, Nitrogen Also Is Supplied.

Cover crops add organic matter to the soil, and if they are leguminous crops, also add nitrogen. They do not altogether replace barnyard manure, but will do more toward keeping the orchard up to a high standard of production than any other one method we can use. Generally speaking, alfalfa has not proved to be a good cover crop for the average soil and orchardist.

Method of Handling Soils.

Clean cultivation in the early part of the season, followed by a clover crop later, is the most up-to-date and best method of handling orchard soils, and can be used with good results more generally than any other system of soil management.

ALL READY FOR EASTER PARADE

As long as there are pretty girls and summer suns, there must be wide sweeping brims on bonnets to protect delicate skins. Catherine Phillips of Washington, D. C., posed here in her new Easter bonnet of white satin.

JOHNSON-HENDRIX.

A wedding of much surprise to her relatives and friends was that of Miss Annie Lucile Hendrix to Harry Johnson of Lexington, Tuesday afternoon at 5:30, at the Broadway Christian Church in the presence of a few intimate friends, among whom were Misses Virginia Seay and Lonella Leet of Hickman. Dr. Fortune, pastor of that church, officiated.

The young couple left immediately for Nicholasville, at which place Mr. Johnson is located, having a position as government inspector for the Jassmine County Dairy Company.

Miss Hendrix is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hendrix of Hickman, who have known for some time of the engagement and had planned to visit her in June, when the wedding was expected to take place. However, the young people stole a march on them, causing the wedding to come as a surprise.

The bride is well known here and is popular among a host of friends, being of a friendly disposition and a charming and accomplished young lady. She at the time of her marriage was junior in the College of the Arts and Sciences at the University of Kentucky. During her three years at the university Miss Hendrix has been prominent in Y. W. C. A. work and other campus activities. For her major subject she has taken sociology. In her freshman year she was a delegate from the university at the Y. W. C. A. conference at Blue Ridge, S. C. During this year also she was one of the cast of the play, "The Feast of the Lanterns," and was a member of the University Glee Club. In her sophomore and junior years Miss Hendrix has kept up in her work in the Y. W. C. A., serving on the cabinet of that organization these two years. Last summer she was delegate to the Y. W. C. A. Council at Mammoth Cave, Ky.

Miss Hendrix is a member of the following university societies: Horace Mann, Philosophian, Rafinesque and Strollers.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will make their home in Nicholasville. The Courier extends congratulations to the young couple and wishes for them a long and happy journey through life.

Miss Nell Bondurant delightfully entertained the Bridge Club Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 5. Bridge was played during the afternoon and at the close a delicious salad course was served. Those present were: Mesdames C. T. Bondurant, A. M. Alexander, E. B. Prather, Jr., Herman Bradley, Karl Talley, W. B. Amberg and Misses Mary Hollan, Jane Binford, and Mrs. Richard Harris of Paducah.

Nothing Hidden From X-Rays. Few organs or parts of the human body are inaccessible to examination by X-rays. The most remarkable advance in this line was the discovery that insoluble opaque salts can be administered to patients in such quantity as to fill the gullet, stomach and intestines, so that these hollow organs may be studied with the rays. The "opaque meal" shows their size, shape and position and also reveals their contractile movements.

APRIL TERM CIRCUIT COURT.

The April term of the Fulton Circuit Court will convene here next week for the trial of civil suits only. This is a term which was authorized by last year's session of the general assembly and was called for because of the increasing number of civil suits which came before the court.

Blackbird Fed Injured Thrush.

A lover of birds who keeps food and water out for them at all times, living a few miles from Wymore, Neb., reports for some time she had been noticing the peculiar actions of a blackbird and a thrush which had been coming to eat regularly, and always together. Upon investigation, she saw that the blackbird fed the thrush, picking up bits of food and putting them into the mouth of the other bird exactly as a robin putting food into the mouths of her young. Closer investigation showed that the bill of the thrush has been broken off close to its head. It was unable to feed itself, and the blackbird had befriended it.

All Willing.

Alfred Knopf, the New York publisher and Russian expert, said in a discussion of Bolshevism:

"So Lenin is discouraged! So he wants to retire to Capri. So he admits he was mistaken in his high opinion of the poor and lowly. Well!"

Mr. Knopf smiled in a grim way. "Lenine," he said, "has now found out what most of us knew long ago. He has found out, I mean, that the world is full of willing people—a few willing to work and the rest willing to let them."
